AUSTIN BUCKET LIST, PART 1

1. Shop for music at Waterloo Records

Remember the good old days of going to your local record store and buying something because the album art looked cool, or getting a recommendation from a cool punk clerk, or picking up xeroxed show flyers? If not, go now. If so, this still exists at Waterloo -- so also go now.

2. Touch everything at Toy Joy

So, the original location is gone, but the second you step inside the new 2nd St store, you'll be transported back to the Drag. Bins of odd plastic toys, vintage replicas, puppets, Sanrio -- it's like being a kid, only now you can afford to actually buy something.

3. Go to a Quote-Along at the Alamo Drafthouse

The Action Pack is responsible for kooky quote-along and sing-along movie events that occur all month. These usually include props, contests, and a lot of singing, dancing, and yelling.

4 Tour a brewery

Or two or three. Independence, Live Oak, Hops & Grain, Austin Beer Works, ABGB, Jester King...

5. Go to movie night/classic car show at Top Notch Hamburgers

Like you need an excuse to eat some of the best burgers and fried chicken around.

6. Hang out on 12th and Chicon

Check out Dozen Street, The Badlands, and one of our favorites, King Bee. These spots are bringing great drinks, food, and live entertainment to the notorious intersection.

7. Watch the bats

Stand on the Congress Ave Bridge or there are riverboat rides for a nominal fee, and they are usually BYOB.

8. Karaoke at Ego's

You haven't lived until you've embarrassed yourself at Ego's. The wood-paneling, the hour-plus long wait for your song, the parking garage... it's all part of the charm.

9. Sunday brunch at Green Pastures

Bring out your Sunday best, peacocks and milk punch await you!
